——— Et RESPONDERE parati.

To Mr. BAVIUS.

THIS diſputing age having carried controverſy about almoſt every thing to ſo great perfection, that in a little time we may expect to ſee it made a queſtion, whether the ſun ſhines by day, or the moon by night; I have been thinking, Mr. BAVIUS, that a diſſertation upon anſwering books, pamphlets, and papers, may not be at preſent unſeaſonable. I am ſenſible, that if what I advance ſhall have any conſiderable weight; it may prove prejudicial to the venders of weekly ſheets and half ſheets in general, and to your Society in particular; by leſſening the number of writers, and conſequently of advertiſements. But I know, you, and your brethren are Gentlemen of ſo publick a ſpirit, that you will encourage any thing which tends to the common good, tho' contrary to your own private intereſt.

Here is a book ſuppoſe, which, being in truth unanſwerable, makes a deep impreſſion upon a certain perſon. He mentions it to his friend, who is of different principles. O, anſwers he, That book's anſwered. Thus the Papiſts in defence of their ridiculous abſurdities in reaſon, and groſs falſhoods in fact, and the Preſbyterians and other Proteſtant Diſſenters, in juſtification of their ſenſeleſs and wicked ſchiſm, have this reply always ready at hand. Every thing they have urged, and do, or can urge, has been unanſwerably anſwered a thouſand times over, and their cauſe demonſtrated to be indefenſible: yet becauſe they have written innumerable books on their own ſide, they think it ſufficient to ſay, that all thoſe on ours are anſwered. They will ſay, no doubt, that this is not true of them, but of us: and I own the bare aſſertion is no argument for either. However, that ſo it is on one ſide or other, will be granted on both; in all controverſies whatſoever; whether philoſophical, theological, or political; whether in point of reaſon, of religion, or of fact. To explain myſelf, Mr. BAVIUS, and to avoid the repetitions of ſays he, and ſays he, and ſays ſuch a one; I will throw the ſubſtance of what I mean into two ſhort dialogues.

DIAL. I.

A. That book's anſwered; thoſe papers and pamphlets are anſwered. There are ſix or ſeven anſwers to them.

B. Ay, but all thoſe anſwers are fully anſwered.

A. By whom, pray?

B. Why by Mr. W. by Dr. S. by J. T. Eſq; by my Lord W. and by three or four without names.

DIAL. II.

A. That book was never anſwered.

B. True; becauſe it is not worth anſwering.

A. That's eaſily ſaid; but the real reaſon is, becauſe 'tis unanſwerable: the man would anſwer it if he could, but he can't.

B. I tell thee, 'tis not becauſe he can't, but becauſe he won't. 'Tis not worth his while; it does not deſerve an anſwer, and ought to be anſwered only with ſilence and contempt.

C. Gentlemen you are both miſtaken. That book is anſwered: I have ſeen and read an anſwer to it.

A. That's impoſſible, I am ſure. The anſwer is no anſwer at all. The book may be written againſt, if you pleaſe; but it can't be anſwered.

Thus ſhall they go on for an hour together, and upon the ſame foot might go on for ever, contradicting one another, begging the queſtion on both ſides, and ſaying nothing. I will therefore endeavour to adjuſt theſe matters, and ſettle that flutter of thought, under which my Countrymen ſeem to labour, upon the ſubject of anſwering and not anſwering books. And here in the firſt place, I deſire them not to argue, as multitudes ſeem to do, that there's no certainty in any thing, becauſe in theſe times there's ſo much diſputing about every thing. It does not follow, that becauſe there's much ignorance, impudence, folly, knavery, impertinence, lying, obſtinacy and perverſeneſs, W——M, and O——N, HENLEY, and BOWMAN in the world; therefore there's no truth. There are many truths for all that; and many of them are plain and eaſy. Some fools will cavil for ever, and about every thing; always wrangling, never convinced. Anſwers (as they have been called) have been written to various books, demonſtrating from the plaineſt facts, the truth of the Chriſtian religion. And ſo an anſwer may be written to EUCLID's elements. Indeed I wonder there has been none. It would be a work worthy the genious of this learned and ſagacious age and nation, in which we have the honour and happineſs to live. Were that book a defence of Chriſtianity, it would undoubtedly have been anſwered before this time. I will from the very firſt line give a ſpecimen how it may be done. A point is that which has no parts. That? What? Is it a body, or a ſpirit? A ſubſtance, or an accident? If it has no parts, 'tis nothing. As for ſpirit, that's nonſenſe. An incorporeal ſubſtance is the ſame as an incorporeal body. And if it be body, it muſt have parts. This is myſtery with a witneſs; that is, a contradiction, as all myſteries are. We cannot comprehend it; and therefore it cannot be true. The word point in EUCLID is as ridiculous as the word perſon, which the Parſons make ſuch a clutter about in their contradictious doctrine of the Trinity. There is no clear, diſtinct, adequate idea annexed to either: and therefore we cannot know, or believe any thing about them. I have repreſented this in their own cant; to ſhew that they may argue againſt Mathematicks, in the ſame language, and upon the ſame principles, as they argue againſt Chriſtianity. I would have it further obſerved, that in all controverſies the worſt cauſe has generally the laſt word; becauſe the maintainers of it have the moſt obſtinacy; and what is wanting in argument is made out in confidence. But ſpeaking, or writing laſt, ſignifies nothing. In trials at the bar the accuſers and the plaintiffs have the reply, or the laſt word; but for all that the accuſed and the defendants often carry their cauſe, and that before the moſt learned, and uncorrupt judges. But to go on, Mr. BAVIUS,

I obſerve (as was well hinted in the 2d dialogue above) that every thing is not properly an anſwer which is called ſo. For inſtance, not a heap of ſpiteful perſonal reflections foreign to the purpoſe. This is not anſwering, but railing: nor repeating the ſame arguments which have been fully anſwered by one's antagoniſt, without taking notice of thoſe anſwers, or adding any thing new. This is not anſwering, but tautology, fraud, teiſing, and impertinence. Nor willfully miſtating the queſtion; repreſenting that as a man's own opinion, which was by him mentioned as another's; falſe quotations and falſe facts: this is not anſwering, but lying. But then, as to the firſt, let it be noted by way of caution, that in ſome certain caſes and circumſtances, a man cannot be uſed too roughly, and no language can be too ſevere for him. Should a Clergyman, for example, whether a P——e or a plain Presbyter, not only be guilty of the greateſt falſhoods both in reaſoning and fact, and propagate principles deſtructive of human happineſs in this world, and the next; but maliciouſly calumniate the Church and Clergy, and vilify thoſe perſons and things, which he is by his ſacred profeſſion, and ſolemn promiſe, obliged to defend; he ſhould be not barely anſwered (if at all anſwered) but to the laſt degree expoſed. Becauſe the man would be directly INFAMOUS; and ought to be ſtigmatized accordingly. Imagine ſuch a one to exiſt in rerum naturâ: if what he ſays be true, why does he not reſign his rich B———, or other eccleſiaſtical preferments, and renounce his holy orders? I appeal to all men of honour, particularly the Gentlemen of the army, whether they would not declare that Officer INFAMOUS, who ſhould defame, and labour to render odious, or contemptible, that Prince, or General, under whom he ſerves, and from whom he received his commiſſion? nay, whether he would not deſerve to be drummed out of the regiment, for making it his buſineſs, and conſtant practice to ſpeak ill of him, tho' never ſo truly? Whatever therefore becomes of the poor Church, Clergy and Chriſtianity; and whatever opinions be entertained concerning them: ſurely if there be any ſuch thing as common honour, and common honeſty yet remaining among us, ſuch men as theſe at leaſt will be deteſted and deſpiſed; and all ingenuous perſons of what perſuaſion ſoever, will (to uſe K. Charles I's words in one of his anſwers to the rebels) brand them, and their doctrine, with the marks of their perpetual ſcorn and indignation.

But what really deſerves the name of an anſwer, is firſt, Talking to the purpoſe, and reaſoning clearly, and ſtrongly; tho' not with truth on one's ſide. This is an anſwer, tho' not full anſwer. 2dly, Proving one's point, and demonſtrating that truth is on one's ſide. This is not only an anſwer but a confutation. Ay, but you'll ſay, the man won't be confuted. That is, ſay I, he won't own he is confuted: and neither you, nor I can help that. In ſhort, the difference between merely writing againſt a book, and anſwering it, is plainly this: the one is nominally anſwering; the other is really anſwering.

But muſt every book, pamphlet and paper be anſwered? Or every anſwer (as it may be called) re-anſwered, or replied to? No. Some are true, and unanſwerable; and therefore no body ſhould pretend to anſwer them. Others are ſo ridiculous, impertinent, and abſurd, to deſerve an anſwer. As thoſe which are themſelves called anſwers, but really are not; of which above. And the ſame may be ſaid of any ridiculous impertinent books, papers, or pamphlets; tho' they are not called anſwers. Thoſe which have any thing ſolid in them, or even a fair and plauſible appearance of truth, which has not been ſubſtantially anſwered already, (I mean in the ſame controverſy) ought to be anſwered. But for the reſt, I ſay as I did before. If I find a book all over impertinent, tautological, impudent and abſurd, written againſt me; I will not anſwer it, but ſcorn it. O! but ſome will ſay, 'tis becauſe I can't anſwer it. Let 'em: nobody of judgment and honeſty will ſay ſo; and I will venture my reputation with the world. I myſelf, Mr. BAVIUS, have had eleven pamphlets written againſt me, which I never took the leaſt notice of; tho' I have anſwered others. Beſides, with regard to diſputes about religion, do people think the Clergy here in London eſpecially, have nothing elſe to do with their time, but to anſwer all the traſh and trumpery which every unlettered, half-witted pettifogger in controverſy is pleaſed to ſcrawl out againſt Jeſus Chriſt, without underſtanding one word of the ſubject he is upon? Thoſe of the Clergy who have both will and abilities to defend Chriſtianity, and actually do defend it, are, 'tis well known, (except two, or three) very buſy; becauſe very poor, having enough to do to get bread. For preferments, and the conſequents of them, quiet and leiſure, were, to be ſure, never intended for ———. But I forbear, Mr. BAVIUS; that is a nice ſubject, and deſerves to be conſidered by itſelf.

But you will ſay, at this rate thoſe little vermin will eſcape the puniſhment they deſerve, merely becauſe of their being little; which is not juſt; ſince they are as malicious as impotent, and as odious as contemptible. I anſwer, tho' they ought not to be anſwered, they ought to be chaſtiſed; to be, in a few words, and a ſhort reflection upon them, ſhewn, for deſpicable wretches, who would do miſchief if they could. And this, Mr. BAVIUS, is one end and deſign of YOUR honourable Society. To the good influence of which it were well, if a law were added, that theſe creatures, being duly convicted, ſhould be delivered over to the King's Scholars, and undergo the ſame diſcipline as CURLL did at Weſtminſter.

In anſwering, or not anſwering, it much alters the caſe whether the book or pamphlet be publiſhed with, or without a name. I will anſwer any thing well written, tho' without a name; but I will not anſwer anonymous ignorance, dullneſs, and ſcurrility. Then again if with a name; the character, quality, and ſtation of the perſon, are material circumſtances. I will (if I can, if I cannot, I will ſubmit) anſwer a man of known parts, learning and great abilities, as a S—— K, or a H—— E; if I differ from him in any material point: tho' in this particular book he writes much below himſelf. I will anſwer one of a quite contrary character, as a S——K——S, or a J——K——N, if he writes well now, tho' he never did ſo before: but he deſerves not to be anſwered, if he writes as he uſually does. I ſay deſerves not; for it does not therefore follow that he ſhould not. I will anſwer ſuch, or ſuch a one running down all eccleſiaſtical authority, and all revealed religion; becauſe he is a B—— (I ſpeak, as I did juſt now, upon ſuppoſition there was ſuch a perſon) and ſo much reſpect is due to his L——'s quality, that he muſt be anſwered. But I am not obliged to anſwer BOWMAN writing upon the ſame ſubject, and in the ſame manner; becauſe he is my equal, or perhaps inferior; and infidelity, malice againſt the Church, and a ſolemn pompous ſhow of reaſon and argumentation, with nothing but ignorance, and illiterate ſophiſtry at the bottom, have not in him a right to be complemented with the ſame ceremony.

Very often the doubt and difficulty is this. If a book, or pamphlet be anſwered, it will do the author too much honour, and make his crudities taken notice of, which otherwiſe they never would have been, but would have died of themſelves. If it be not; it will be ſaid it is unanſwerable, and the ſcribler will triumph in his adverſaries ſilence. This, I confeſs, is a difficult point, and hard to be determined. We muſt judge, as well as we can, upon prudential conſiderations, and comparing of circumſtances. There is a kind of middle way between anſwering and not anſwering. I mean anſwering, ſo as ſeemingly not to anſwer: utterly overthrowing the principles of him you are engaged with; yet treating him and his work with neglect and contempt, and anſwering him without appearing to be in earneſt, tho' you really are. How many books were written by the moſt learned men againſt the trifles of HOBBS? yet the ingenious EACHARD, by diſguiſing his ſolid reaſonings with ludicrous wit, inimitable in its kind, did more to the mortification of that ſolemn dogmatical coxcomb, than all the reſt of his anſwerers put together. It was indeed right to anſwer ſo philoſophical and voluminous an atheiſt, both ways; ſeriouſly, as many did; and comically, as EACHARD did. T—D—L, the HOBBS of this age, has been abundantly anſwered in the former way; it would be well if he were anſwered in the latter. His Chriſtianity as old as the Creation, in which there is not a word of truth, or ſound reaſoning, is as good a ſubject of ridicule, as any age has produced.

But it will be aſked, who are in the right, and who are in the wrong, in anſwering, and not anſwering, according to the meaſures here laid down? Who is impertinent, tautological, impudent, abſurd, fraudulent, &c. and who not? And who ſhall be judge? The reſolution is eaſy. The writers in the diſpute muſt judge as well as they can; and others muſt judge of them as well as they can. But let both take care they be diligent, unprejudiced, and impartial. For if they make an ill uſe of the reaſon which God has given them, in judging about anſwering, and not anſwering; they muſt one day ſeverely anſwer for it. Pray, Mr. BAVIUS, give my ſervice to Mr. CONUNDRUM; and tell him I do not by thoſe words intend to invade his Province. I am very grave; and my meaning is only this; that thoſe who think, talk, and write perverſly about anſwering in the one ſenſe, would do well ſeriouſly to conſider it in the other.

On wedneſday laſt at Norwich Mr. John Brown, a Grocer in Market-ſtreet place, was by the Court of Aldermen choſen one of the Sheriffs of this City for the enſuing year. D P. D J.

By letters from S. Thomas on the coaſt of Africa, dated June 6, by a Dutch ſhip, we learn, that the S. Andrew, Capt. Nic. Webb, from London, who was arrived there, was dead, and all his men except 4; and that the ſhip had been ſeized by the Portugueze; but according to the Captain's deſire, 4 days before his death, ſhe was delivered to an Engliſh ſhip, Capt. Blizard, who carried the ſaid ſhip directly to Barbadoes. C. D P. About 6 or 7 of her hands, which remained alive, carried her into the Iſland of Princes, where the Portugueze would have taken poſſeſſion of her, but through the good conduct of Capt. Hogg ſhe was preſerved, and enabled to proſecute her voyage. D J. —— By theſe letters we learn alſo that Fort Jaquin was deſtroyed by the King of the country, and all the people cut off. D P. C.

On ſunday morning laſt two Farmers and two labouring men went to a fiſh-pond by Lambone Church, near Aybridge in Eſſex, belonging to Mr. Moore, who having frequently ſuffered by the taking fiſh out of it, happened at the ſame time to be ſo near it, as that only a hedge was between; one of the men, who went in firſt, being deceived in the depth, ſunk; the other then went to aſſiſt him, but ſhared the ſame fate; and Farmer Meredith, endeavouring to recover them, was near drowning; but his neighbour, with much difficulty, fortunately ſaved him by the help of Mr. Moore, who, ſeeing the Tragedy, came to their relief. This affair being ſoon rumoured in the church, the people went out to ſee the unhappy men that were drowned; ſo that the prayers being ended, and the congregation gone, the Parſon reſerved his ſermon to another opportunity. D J.

Yeſterday morning, about 3, dy'd at his habitation at Mile-end, of the gout in his ſtomach, aged 74, Major Stuart, a half-pay Officer, who was in the commiſſion of the peace for the Tower-hamlets in the reign of Queen Anne: he was a brother to the late Gen. Stuart. D P. P. —— Yeſterday in the afternoon at his houſe in S. Martin's lane, Major Bembow, who formerly belonged to the firſt troop of Life-guards. C.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 30.

Yeſterday at a Board of Admiralty, their Lordſhips were pleaſed to appoint Mr. John Douglas firſt Lieutenant of his Majeſty's ſhip the Hector, and Mr. Will. Huet 2d Lieutenant; and Mr. Webber, late Boatſwain, and Mr. Molding, Carpenter of the ſloop Cruizer, to be Officers of his Majeſty's ſloop the Spy. C. D J.

Yeſterday the Prince and Princeſſes went to Bartholomew-fair, and ſaw Mr. Feilding's celebrated Droll, call'd, the Earl of Eſſex and the Forc'd Phyſician, and were ſo well pleaſed as to ſtay to ſee it twice perform'd. D P.

Extract of a letter from Calcutta in the Eaſt-Indies, dated Jan. 5. Two days ſince a party of Gentlemen were hunting Jackalls about 6 miles from this town, it being a cuſtom ſo to do two or three times a week at this ſeaſon of the year, who were met by about 100 Peons belonging to a petty Jemmidar, and aſſaulted in a violent manner, many arrows being ſhot at them, for no other provocation than riding over their grounds; the Gentlemen, having no arms to defend themſelves, narrowly eſcaped with their lives, and immediately went and repreſented the caſe to our Governor, who ordered about 50 ſoldiers, a Captain and an Enſign to go and demand the Jemmidar's perſon, to anſwer for the affront done to the Engliſh, with orders, in caſe of refuſal, to burn his fort and town; which was accordingly done, and about 4 of the Poens kill'd in the attack: how this may terminate we know not. D P.

We learn from Jamaica, by letters of the 26th of June, that the hulks, &c. were removed from Kingſton, &c. to Port Antonio, at the eaſt end of the iſland, which new town encreaſed daily, and Kingſton and Port Royal viſibly decreaſed. This port is very ſafe, and commodiouſly ſituated for the windward paſſage; and being encouraged by the Government, it is believed will ſoon be the moſt flouriſhing in that iſland. Many perſons who were ſettled near it, had planted Coffee, and were uſing their utmoſt endeavours to bring it to perfection. D J.

The South Sea Company's ſhips employ'd this year in the whale-fiſhery, are now all ſafely arrived back in the river, conſiſting of 21 ſail, 14 of which came from Greenland, and 7 from Davis's Streights, bringing among them twenty four Whales and a half, ſeveral of which are very large, and the reſt are good ſizeable fiſh. Ibid.

Yeſterday in the afternoon a melancholy accident happen'd a little below the bridge, where 9 women croſſing the river from Billingſgate, the boat running upon an iron chain which ſerv'd to moor ſhips by, overſet ſo ſuddenly, that 3 of 'em (one big with Child) were drown'd, and the other 6 were with much difficulty ſaved, notwithſtanding the immediate aſſiſtance which came to their relief. Ib.

A few days ſince Tomkin the ſmuggler, who lately turn'd evidence againſt ſome of his gang, was ſeiz'd at Riverhead in Kent, by a party of his former comrades (but what they have done with him is not yet known; tho' their intention was (as they declared) to put him in a ſack, and drown him in the ſea. D P.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-ſtreet.

The following copy of verſes, ſent to the Society ſome time ſince, is now publiſhed, not as containing their ſentiments, but thoſe of the unknown Author, whom they are willing to oblige.

While Drurian Actors, RICH, with envious eyes
In Bow ſtreet ſee th'aſpiring fabric riſe;
That great ſucceſs thy great deſign may crown,
Employs the wiſhes of th'impartial Town.

Too long indulgent to one Houſe alone
With brighteſt rays their partial favour ſhone:
Now ſtreaks of ruddy light, like early morn,
With kind preſage thy riſing pile adorn.

No more ſhall crowds in Drury-lane be ſeen,
While half-fill'd boxes ſound at Lincolns-Inn.
W——KS ſhall no more our eyes and ears ingage,
Or B—— TH with ſteps majeſtic tread the ſtage.
Poets no longer ſhall ſubmit their Plays
To learned C——R's gilded wither'd bays;
To ſuch a Judge the labour'd ſcene preſent,
Whom ſenſible and pretty won't content.
But to thy Theatre with pleaſure bear
The comic laughter and the tragic tear.

Let that great Actor, who ſo oft has ſhown
All Nature's graces heighten'd by his own,
As age increaſes, and his ſtrength decays,
Willing retire, grown old in wealth and praiſe.
As for the reſt, none e'er will riſe ſo high,
But vainly with thy noble Actors vie.
Let thy Othello roar, or bid King Lear
Rage in wild frenzy, and they'll diſappear.
Forth on thy ſtage thy Lady Townley call,
And H——N a victim ſhall to Y——G——R fall.
Improving C——P——N ſuch applauſe will gain,
That C——B——R's both ſhall act and write in vain.
Nor Sire, nor Son, ſo witty, pert, and gay
Can humour e'er like H——P——Y diſplay.

Be cautious H——L——M leſt you ſoar too high,
And by attempting to match R——N dye.
Let B——G——R no more act Hotſpur's rage,
While W——K——R lives to ſhake the trembling Stage.
Nor jigging M——SH——L ſtrive to force a tear,
While H——L——TS Gloſter raviſhes our ear.
Let but B——CH——N Deſdemona play
And conſcious TH——R——D muſt reſign to day;
Or Lady Grace with reading blind her eyes,
And Madam C——B——R tacitly complys.
Tho' laſt, not leaſt in worth, let M——L——D come
To ſtrike young M——LS with grief and wonder dumb.

With ſuch experienc'd forces take the field,
And make theſe antiquated tyrants yield.
Deſpotic arbitrary pow'r they claim:
But legal rule alone is all your aim.
Proud, inſolent, and vain, applauſe they'd ſeize:
Whilſt you endeavour modeſtly to pleaſe.
Go on, and proſper: to the raviſh'd eye
May thy vaſt art new wondrous ſcenes ſupply:
And when thou late art forc'd to quit the Stage;
Another RICH ariſe to pleaſe the age.

Dublin, Aug. 22. We are informed that ſome days ago a blaſt of whirlwind carried a great hay-cock of Mr. James Dunn, at the Croſs-Guns in Caſtleknock, and Clerk of the ſaid Pariſh, a great height into the air, where it continued, as it is ſaid, above an hour, and at laſt fell entire, as it formerly ſtood, in a field of corn at a great diſtance from the place it was taken from. P.

Charleſtown in Carolina, June 24. Wedneſday night we had a violent ſtorm of thunder and lightning, which did conſiderable damage in the houſe of Dr. Tho. Smith in Broad-ſtreet; having paſſed through moſt of the rooms, melted the blade of a ſword in a ſcabbard, and the muzzle of a gun, and ſhattered the whole houſe in a terrible manner. P.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, Auguſt 24.

Yeſterday arrived the Mail due from France.

Milan, Aug. 9. Above 8000 workmen are ſaid to be actually employed in the new fortifications of Alexandria de la Paille in Savoy, and that by the Emperor's conſent, by virtue of a treaty concluded between the Courts of Vienna and Sardinia. D P.

Petersburgh, July 30. N. S. By a Courier diſpatched by the Czarina's Reſident Neplies at Conſtantinople, we hear, that he met on this ſide of Adrianople ſeveral detachments of Albanian troops marching towards the Helleſpont: That the Horſe-tail was erected before the gates of the Seraglio the 6th inſt. and war publickly proclaimed againſt the Sophi of Perſia: That above 80,000 men of the European troops were going by the way of the black Sea: that the troops were ſtill aſſembling in all parts of Aſia, and that in 2 months at fartheſt the Grand Seignior propoſed to have an army in Perſia of 300,000 men. P.

Paris, Aug. 30. The ſame day the Gens du Roy reported to the Chambers aſſembled, that the King would not hear them. Upon it was reſolved, that they ſhould return again to Marli, and humbly beſeech his Majeſty to hear his Parliament. D P.

FRIDAY, Aug. 25.

Yeſterday arrived the Mail from Flanders.

Moſcow, July 30. The Expreſs diſpatched from General Lewaſchau at Derbent brings word, that all things go in favour of the Sophy; that all the Provinces of that great Kingdom have ſent their Deputies to Iſpahan, to thank his Majeſty for the ſtep he has taken, &c. for which reaſon they were unanimouſly reſolved to exert themſelves, and raiſe a ſufficient number of horſe and foot, to extend the limits of the kingdom as far as they were in the glorious reign of the Great Chack Abbas his Anceſtor: 'tis added, that all the cities in Perſia are in arms, and no perſon that is capable exempted from ſervice. D P.

Hague, Aug. 5. N. S. The Duke de Ripperda (we hear) is to civilize the kingdom of Morocco, wherein he has made a conſiderable progreſs; and to give him a ſort of authority, they talk of a match between him and the Queen-mother, who was a Chriſtian ſlave, and ſome ſay a native of England; but he that as it will, ſhe has a great influence over her ſon King Abdallah. If this match goes forward, the Duke will carry his point at Court, and do what good or harm he pleaſes there, the King being a very eaſy and good-natured Prince. P.

Milan, Aug. 6. We have received advice, that the great rains which fell laſt week, having ſwelled ſeveral ſtreams and rivers to an extraordinary degree, which came down from the neighbouring mountains, had done an incredible deal of damage in the country; that the borough of Gallerata, among others were entirely overflowed; that all the houſes were borne down by the rapidity of the torrent; and that a great number of men, women and children were drowned, together with all the cattle that were in the meadows. They add, that the caſtle of the Marquis de Maganda was entirely deſtroyed by lightning. C.

SATURDAY, Aug. 26.

Parma. Aug. 9. Bigotillos late Governor of Oran appears to be the ſame perſon who took Oran from the Spaniards in 1708, and was ever held in high eſteem amongſt the Moors. Many remarkable things are told of him, (now known under the name of Muſtapha) in praiſe of his valour, good ſenſe, and integrity; amongſt others, that being bred a Maſon in his youth, he has conſtantly employed his leiſure hours that way, not to forget the condition from whence he roſe. D P.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 30.

Ratisbon, Aug. 28. N. S. A Pruſſian officer, who went from hence ſome days ago with ſome recruits, paſſing thro' the territories of Bavaria, was attacked by a detachment of Bavarian troops, who fired upon him; but the Pruſſian officer nimbly repaſſing the Danube, had the good luck to eſcape, and returned hither.——We ſee here a Memorial which has been communicated to the publick dictature on the part of the Emigrants of Saltzburgh; whereby it appears, That thoſe poor people are forced to leave their country, without giving them time to provide themſelves with money or other neceſſaries for a journey: That they ſtill ſuffer all manner of injuries: That in the very paſſports which are granted them, ſeveral of them are treated like rebels, and that in ſpite to their religion: That they are forbid to return into that country, upon pain of being uſed with the utmoſt ſeverity: That ſeveral of their children are detained by force: That among others, a boy of 10 years of age, being locked up to prevent his going with his parents, jumped out of a window 3 ſtories high in the night, without coming to any harm, and overtook his parents at Augsburg: That ſeveral who have conſiderable eſtates were not permitted to carry any thing away with them: And that they had kept back 10 per Cent. of what the others brought away, &c. C.
